changes are happening in the Bitcoin community for the better.

From big investors like Mike Novogratz and Brian Armstrong to artists like Josephus and Crypto Joe, the cryptocurrency industry is making headlines and bringing unprecedented attention to a topic once regarded as a fringe experiment. The cryptocurrency industry is growing, and people with notable backgrounds are joining the fun, making it the melting pot it once seemed like it was going to be. Sometimes, though, the fame that comes with attending events like Consensus conferences can be a double-edged sword for people who are keen to promote new ideas. When it comes to scaling, mainstream adoption and real-life application, one of the most promising ideas can get lost in the noise. In terms of this week's lineup, there's a lot of potential to learn from, but it's also fun to see what else has come to the fore. Here are some of the biggest conferences taking place this week.

Maker Image: Maker

The three-day Maker conference features speeches from prominent speakers like Naval Ravikant, Balaji Srinivasan and David Sacks and, from a Maker perspective, one of the biggest highlights comes in the form of BaaS solutions. Specifically, the talk from Ethereum developers Adam

Back, Gabriel Nelson and Charles Hoskinson talks about how they made the shift from Ethereum contracts to side-chains on the leading smart
